Not just a destination. The Overberg is a treasure worn close to your heart. Add your story to our string of pearls.

Welcome to the Overberg

Cradled between mountains and valleys, the Overberg unfolds with sleepy villages and rich landscapes, bordered by a pristine Atlantic coastline. Once a hidden gem cherished by off-the-beaten-track adventurers, much has changed.

As people sought peaceful lifestyles close to nature, the region blossomed into a world-class destination, its exceptional wines claiming their place on the international stage.

In the shadow of South Africa's historic winelands, the Overberg's viticultural tale began in the late 1970s. Visionary farmers, inspired by coastal breezes, planted the seeds of a new wine legacy. The new millennium brought ambition; the region's terroir awakened, giving birth to vineyards of distinction. From sun-kissed slopes and misty valleys emerged acclaimed estates, their wines embodying the Overberg's soul – a blend of tradition and innovation.

It's the pioneering spirit that sets the Overberg apart. These farmers-turned-alchemists, with calloused hands and hearts attuned to the earth, coax magic from diverse soils. Under skies that paint vines with cool Atlantic breezes, they craft wines of singular character – liquid postcards speaking eloquently of their origins.

We invite you to join us in celebrating the passionate artisans who, alongside culinary maestros and gracious hosts, have transformed this land into a vinicultural heaven. We trust our guide will inspire many memorable experiences.

Overberg Wine - A Sense of Place

By Jean-Pierre Rossouw

Our wine region begins as you cross “over the mountain” (Over-Berg) at Sir Lowry’s Pass. Immediately, you’re enveloped by a sense of expansiveness - more farmland, more wild terrain, interspersed with carefully cultivated pockets of vines.

Each area in the Overberg has become renowned for certain varieties or styles of wine, shaped by its unique microclimate: The beautiful Elgin Valley, perched at altitude, which means cooler nights and mild days, is known for fine Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Sauvignon Blanc. Bot River at the foot of the Houw Hoek Pass, with its windy, warmer climate, is famed for Chenin Blanc and Pinotage; you will also find great Shiraz and Cabernet Franc.

On to seaside Hermanus, where the Hemel-en-Aarde Valley has gained world-renown for its elegant Pinot Noirs and Chardonnays. Further east, around the picturesque village of Stanford, you will find small wineries that make lovely maritime-influenced blends, Sauvignon Blanc and Pinotage. From here you travel to the wild and windy climate and topography of Cape Agulhas, where Sauvignon Blanc and Syrah are the calling cards of a dynamic wine-growing area that is a rising star.

Welcome to our wine region! The Overberg’s diverse landscapes and wines cannot be fully appreciated in just a day or two. Take your time to explore this captivating area - we promise these will be days long remembered, filled with discovery and delight.

Regenerative Farming

Quality Soil makes Better Wine

he term ‘regenerative farming’ refers to a holistic alternative to the degenerative effects of conventional agriculture on natural habitats and ecosystems. It’s transforming the wine industry’s approach to viticulture, and in a biodiversity hotspot such as Hemel-en-Aarde, winegrowers are committing to the approach.

Hasher Family Wines is a progressive winery that has adopted regenerative farming practices to foster a harmonious relationship between viticulture and the environment. Owner Frederik Herten emphasises the long-term vision vested in the approach: "We're not just farming for today, but for future generations. Regenerative practices ensures the land we cherish will continue thriving and producing exceptional wines for years to come."

This holistic approach to vineyard management looks beyond the vines to encompass the entire ecosystem. The focus has shifted from mere grape production to nurturing soil health, promoting biodiversity, and preserving the natural balance of the land.

A significant change at the Hasher Estate has been the complete elimination of pesticides. Local predator bugs are introduced to combat the mealybug, while runner ducks keep the snail population in check.

Natural pest control not only protects the vines but supports the local ecosystem. Herbicides are a thing of the past and Hasher's vineyards now boast permanent cover crops, regularly mowed to maintain optimal growth. Plans are underway to introduce sheep to serve as natural lawnmowers, further reducing the need for mechanical intervention.

Soil health is paramount in the regenerative approach. Compost tea, a nutrient-rich liquid, introduces essential microbiological life for a healthy underground ecosystem. A newly acquired compost tea machine is being shared among neighbouring vineyards, fostering a spirit of collaboration and resource efficiency.

This collaborative spirit amongst Hemel-en-Aarde wine farms extends to environmental stewardship beyond just vineyards. Establishing wildlife corridors

We're not just farming for today, but for future generations. Regenerative practices ensures our land thrives and produces exceptional wines for years to come."

throughout the region, enables local fauna to safely roam the landscape.

As these regenerative practices take root, the Hemel-en-Aarde winegrowers are becoming not just the producer of fine wines, but guardians of a thriving, sustainable ecosystem. This holistic approach promises a brighter future for both the wine industry and the natural world it depends upon.

Culture Wines Revisited

Chenin Blanc and Colombar

By Melvyn Minnaar

When one talks South African wine culture, it's the C-wines that tell the sharpest stories. Now that old-time Steen has taken the white wine lead as modern Chenin Blanc, many smart winemakers are polishing that other C-challenge, Colombar. Both long-established as vineyard workhorses, time has arrived for a revisit, reinvention and a rekindling of old love-affairs.

Chenin Blanc wears the go-to, prize-winning crown with grace. The list of fine wines from this versatile and giving grape is long, honourable and beautifully diverse.

Colombar or Colombar (the easy-going time of its big-time debut around the 1950s didn't fret too much about the 'd') was more of a shy operator, but widely a central one in the country's white wine boom. That it could be distilled for excellent brandy didn't mean it didn't bring zip and perfume to the so-called 'premier grand cru' wines of the 1970s and later.

But like the trajectory of 'Steen' to high-end 'proudly South African' by inspired winemakers, Colombar now has the attention of the young and talented – and the daring.

The Overberg region and beyond have quite a few of those adventurers. And even if Colombard was comfortably at home in the more inland regions (make Robertson a key anchor, and the older vineyards northwest), the dare to reinvent this under-the-radar grape could not pass by someone like Sebastian Beaumont of that family's winery.

The fact that he produces one of the finest Chenins, the much-awarded Hope Marguerite, confirms the credentials. And so does the region – so, when in the area, check out Luddite, Creation, Gabriëlskloof, Wildekrans, Villion, to mention but a few Chenins Blanc.

For Colombard you may have to drive a tad further, but do look out for labels like Naude, Sakkie Mouton, and the beauties of Robertson, McGregor and Bonnievale. The latter is also where you'll find one of my favourites, John and Karen Loubser's Silverthorn River Dragon – a Cap Classique bubbly from an old, old Colombard vineyard.

weekend return trip on an 80-year-old steam train with the Ceres Rail Company. The train's arrival at the station is a spectacle for all ages.

The Hermanus Country Market is a gathering place where community spirit, artisanal craftsmanship, and culinary delights converge. Held every Saturday, it showcases a wonderful selection of locally-produced goods. Don't miss their Summer Night Markets on Wednesdays during December and January.

Other notable markets include Greyton and Stanford's Saturday morning markets, and Stanford's Sunset Market held every last Friday of the month (September-May) on the historic Village Green.
